the members; or if the sons do not live happily together, specially when the father has married again and had other issue, the parents make a partition. This partition takes place in the presence of the members of the Kulidrup (the council of the village people). A Kulidrup is called and the father divides all the land, cattle, and other things. The landed property is divided equally, the father and the sons get a share each. The house is also divided equally among the sons and father. If in a house there are four rooms then each will get one, provided all are married. The son with whom the parents live retains possession of their share during their lifetime. Unmarried sons get a double share of the live-stock, one share, for their marriage expenses. Daughters get no share in the property but if they are unmarried they get one calf each, that being the dowry to be given them at marriage, because during the marriage the bride's side has to give a calf to the brother of the bridegroom. The cattle which the sons get at their marriage are divided. But the cattle which the daughters-in-law received from their fathers, brothers and from their fathers-in-law at the time of marriage are not divided. After the death of the wife of a Santal, her unmarried sons cannot claim a partition even if their father takes a second wife, but they can do so if they like after marriage. If the second wife has no children when the father dies the sons by his first wife will get the share of the father provided they agree to pay for the funeral of their step-mother.
